THE FOLK COLLECTION

An observation and recommendation from Bob Stane (Former owner of The Ice House and present of The Coffee Gallery Backstage).

The Folk Collection is comfortable. With them you know what you are getting and consistency can be such a wonderful trait. There is no risk and lots of reward. You get an evening of folk music and nostalgia and a fine, beneficial dose of self deprecating humor.

As soon as they do their first number of the evening you know there will be a bushell of smiles all through the night, just the right amount of singing along and solid identification with the lives and loves of everyone in the room. You can almost feel the "warm and fuzzy." Another thing you know is that the evening will end with a well deserved standing encore.

You and your audience will know they've gotten their money and their evening's worth and that everyone will want to repeat the experience soon.

Your venue's reputation will be enhanced. I gave them the best recommendation I can by inviting them back for every mutual opening we both have. Forever. There is no way they can play "too often." The light will always be burning for them in the window.
