

The Folk Collection reaches out to different generations

REGISTER-PAJARONIAN STAFF REPORT

Southern California-based band The Folk Collection will perform Friday at 8 p.m. at CSU Monterey Bay's World Theater.

All four members — Tony Unger, Ed Labowitz, Mike Sirota and Bob Packham — grew up in the 1960s during the time of songs with barmenies and acoustic music. Unger and Labowitz began playing together while in high school, and were joined by Sirota and Packham a few years ago. Many of the songs performed by the group are familiar to people of all ages, from "Blowin' in the Wind" to "Where Have All the Flowers Gone."

Their oncerts are family friendly and appeal to many generations. The group has said how enjoy watching teenagers reluctantly enter with their parents or grandparents and leave smiling while humming songs performed, confirming what they knew when they formed the group: that people of all
